The meetings of ambassadors had been practically continuous since last December and would be resumed whenever the powers deemed the correct moment had

During the war between the Balkan allies there had been none of the ill-omened reports of mobilization and so forth amongst the great powers which had caused such anxiety during the war with Turkey. It had been an axiom of European diplomacy that a quarrel amongst the Balkan states would be the signal for the intervention of some of the great powers. That axiom had been disproved in practise and the concert of Europe was never more complete than at the present moment.

There might not have-been unanimity of view on every point, but the war had been localized, and that was the main thing. The powers had acted on the promise that if Constantinople and Asia could be kept out of the discussion it would be possible to reach an agreement. An understanding had now been come to by which the limits of the new Albanian state had been fixed. The boundaries might be subject to a great deal of local criticism, but the primary essential of keeping the powers together on the subject had been reached.

In fixing the boundaries of Albania the United Kingdom was willing to agree to the decisions of other powers who had direct interests in the matter, but in settling the question of the future of the Aegean islands her own part had been far more prominent as the question of naval power in the Mediterranean trans-

There remained two serious questions allies, namely the division of Macedonia and the occupation of Adrianople. The reoccupation of Adrianople in his opinion had been a great mistake on the part of the Turkish government and the powers had a perfect right to intervene inasmuch as if the powers had not forbidden the advance beyond the Enos-Midia line the troops of the allies would during the war, have advanced beyond Tehataldja on Constantinople.

Character in Furniture As in People is Hard to Define But Easy to Recognize

Instinctively we recognize the man of character by what we see in his face, his manner, his carriage, his actions, and all the other details which make him different from every other man.

In the same way we recognize furniture of character.

All the little details of its design, construction, material and finish-all together producing a definite impression-make such furniture very, very different from every other kind of furniture. That desirable, in fact necessary, quality in furniture is the dominant characteristic of the furniture in the Wanamaker August Sale.

Like a man of character it stands out clearly by contrast with the commonplace furniture which has no other distinguishing points than its cheapness—in both price and construction.

Of course, the character which is so evident in Wanamaker furniture is the result of the factories that are behind it. They are factories which have carried down the traditions of the great furniture periods of the past:-

(1) Chasteness and unity of design.

Carefully-selected, well-seasoned, knot-free woods.

Skilled craftsmen who put their hearts, heads and hands into their work with a will.

Such only are the factories which can supply the Wanamaker furniture all others are excluded.

We invite you to inspect the furniture of character in the Wanamaker August Sale (original), offered at ten to fifty per cent. below usual prices. 5th, 6th, and 7th Galleries, New Building.

SCHOOL WORK

A FACULTY of experienced college-bred teachers, working together for a common end, insures thoroughness and definiteness of school work. Weekly summing up of each boy's progress and careful consideration of each pupil's needs, means the efficient handling of the particular problem of every boy's development. Under our system boys acquire a real live interest in their work, learn to apply themselves, and gain a thorough preparation for college or for LVERY facility for football, basketball and baseball. The school has a remarkable athletic record, having won twice in succession, the Interpreparatory League Baseball championship, and gained many notable victories in basketball and in football. During the past year, the school had, besides its regular football team, four basketball teams and three baseball teams, all playing regular schedules, thus insuring the participation of a large number of boys in athletic activities.

ON SHIPPAN POINT, THE WATER OF LONG ISLAND SOUND. A wonderful combination of seashore and country. Every room in the main building commands a view of the water. Fifteen acres of lawn, garden and orchard. The beauty of its situation is in itself an inspiration.

BEAUTIFUL modern dormitory, with running hot and cold water in every sleeping room. Gymnasium, 100 x 50 feet, with basketball courts, bowling alleys, etc. School building with large study hall, class rooms, chemical and physical laboratory, manual training shops, etc. Large and attractive cottage for a limited number of younger boys.

Stamford, Connecticut

THE school offers a real home to its pupils. The institutional atmosphere is noticeably absent. A spirit of friendliness permeates the entire school, and everyone is made to feel at home. This is greatly enhanced by the close association of pupil and teacher. "Harmonious" and "homelike" are the terms most frequently applied by those who visit the school.

If you care to know more about Manor School, write to LOUIS D. MARRIOTT, M. A., Headmaster

THIS school honestly endeavors to impart to its pupils the fundamentals of right living. It aims to give to every boy the instruction which most parents fail to give; it seeks to keep in close touch with the mental and moral development of its charges; it stands ready to help a boy fight his battles, to counsel and to instruct, to warn and to advise. By an intimate understanding of boy problems and a sympathy with the problems of boy life, it endeavors to deserve the confidence of every pupil, young or old, and to stand by him in distress, to be patient with him in defeat, and to rejoice with him in victory.

RESULTS

MANOR graduates are today in all the leading colleges of the country. Some of them have gained distinction for high scholarship or along literary lines; some have made their mark athletically; practically all have gained recognition as earnest, capable young men. Harvard has received more of our graduates than any other college. Yale, Princeton, Columbia, University of Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Dartmouth, Amherst, Leland Stanford and other leading colleges and universities can attest the effectiveness of our methods. In business, too, many former pupils are occupying positions of trust and responsibility.

Gregg School Is the Originator of Efficiency Standards in Shorthand Training

When GREGG SCHOOL was organized seventeen years ago, the main idea of its founder was to produce more efficient stenographers than had ever been produced

In that idea lay the beginning of what has since become the largest and best known school in the world, devoted exclusively to the teaching of shorthand and

GREGG SCHOOL is progressive. Its policy is to always give the most up-to-date course of study and practise that money and experience can provide. Its methods have been called revolutionary by those clinging to antiquated systems and methods of instruction. But the success of our methods has made imitators of those who first decried them, thus furnishing the most convincing evidence of their efficacy. GREGG SCHOOL is more than a school -it is an efficiency laboratory in everything that pertains to high-grade stenographic work.

Also aboard the Michigan were three returning cattlemen, two of whom, Joseph B. Lynch and Chester F. At the end of the 18 second stage Ommundsen was still leading, thus securing a silver medal, and so performing a feat unparalleled in the long history of the competition, no one having previously secured both the silver and bronze medal.

Shooting in the final stage commenced at noon on the concluding day in weather conditions favorable for high scoring. Interest at the outset centered chiefly in the doings of Ommundsen, and at 900 vards he certainly did not belie the conmost in every one's mind was whether game in every way. # TAKES EMPIRE MATCH AT MEET

Australia Wins Mackinnon Cup and Scotland the Elcho Shield at Bisley Competition -Matches Are Very Close

CONTEST SUCCESSFUL

(Special to the Monitor) LONDON-Of the many events that are crowded into the Bisley fortnight none excite more interest than the shooting for the King's prize. But important though this event may be there is a very large program of team and individual prize competitions which are especially attractive to the large numbers whose hobby is rifle shooting. The meeting recently concluded was a great success, and both entries and spectators have been numerous. Owing to the control of the army council over Bisley camp many of the civilian competitors consider their position somewhat unsatisfactory; but it is hoped that in course of time both the council and the National Rifle Association will be able to make concessions that will in no wise interfere with the success of rifle shooting as a sport. Among the many other competitions Great Britain secured the empire match, land the Elcho shield. The shooting for the Mackinnon cup was keen, there being entries from Scotland, England, Cannamed, their scores being 504, 503 and 500 respectively.

The Spencer cup, for competition by one member of each Ashburton team, was won by R. G. Sillars of Oundle. Oxford beat Cambridge in the Humphrey cup by 766 to 710, but were beaten in the hancellor's plate by 734 to 729. The territorials from the mother country and

The King's Norton competition for 15 shots at 1200 yards went to S. D. Whitehead. Reference to the competition for the lent account of the event has been provided by one of the competitors. In addition to the above, matches for small bore rifles, revolvers, also moving targets, tended to make the meeting thoroughly interesting as well as most instructive. NEW YORK STATE LEAGUE Scranton 1.

School Gardens Not for Profit

The first question invariably asked about school gardens concerns the disposition made of the produce and flowers, as if the production and possible financial gain were the chief aim and object of the work. In several schools the cooking department serves a luncheon or teachers and pupils, save an article on Los Angeles gardens in the Craftsman. Some of the garden vegetables are used for these luncheons; more for the regular cooking lessons, when each girl is privileged to eat what she cooks. The rest are divided among the pupils and taken home. In individual gardens the young gardener disposes of his produce as he chooses. The flowers go to the children. At the Gardena high school some boys have made a little money by selling their vegetables. Never under any circumstances is a thing wasted; nor is stress ever laid on financial gains from school gardens. With 70,000 pupils home consumption solves the question.

It is said in the preface to the "Everyman" edition that the work which he did in the later part of his career without Mrs. Browning's companionship shows less of the pure poetic strain than the work he did side by side with her. To be sure "The Ring and the Book" came afterward, and it is of course one of his supreme claims to fame; but this was produced under the immediate influence of her memory. The works that followed it are less convincing of his poetic power.

Not Governor But Political Power Is Impeached

WILLIAM SULZER, Governor of the greatest American state, is called upon to defend himself in the first impeachment proceedings ever brought against a New York chief executive. This incident is much more than personal. While it offers no resemblance to a defense of Mr. Sulzer should misdeeds be proved against him in the high court where he is to be tried, composed of the state Senate, and the judges of the court of appeals, the towering political and moral fact in the affair is that Tammany Hall brought about his present predicament as the penalty for his refusal to do its bidding. It shows in the proceeding the full force of its effort to destroy where it cannot control and in doing that it exposes to the full view of a people not a different but the same power that it has been suspected of employing to shelter those who yielded the due measure of servile obedience. Mr. Sulzer would have been unassailed if only he had not defied those who put him in office and who expected there his compliance with their mandates.

A perfected political organization without morality and operated solely for gain is revealed in apparently potent action. It would have been no more effectually uncovered if it had been seen in the full light of day moving to the defense of some one of its creatures whose continuance on the bench was at stake. Whether defending adroitly or pursuing unsparingly, the operation is the same. The Sulzer incident is Tammany's exposure, and not Tammany's either but a revelation of an insidious power most unaccountably tolerated when its movements are no more than suspected or are even half proved.

The New York proceeding has its value in the hope it arouses, if not the confidence it ought to supply, that it will bring nearer to an end the sort of politics no more apparent in the charges against the Governor than in the origin and the design of the pursuit. How many are being shielded because they are obedient may not be guessed. A great suspicion arises as to the placing of men in office by the aid of this organization. But all political oligarchies are better known through Tammany's unintended confession of its ways. Politics demand a mark for their fire and if they are to proceed against organized public iniquity they will find the target ready for them in this exposure.

The Knights Templars Conclave

IN THE HISTORY of the order in America, perhaps a finer setting was never prepared for its spectacular expression than that which nature, combined with native hospitality, enables Denver to offer the Knights Templars this week in their thirty-second triennial pilgrimage and conclave. In nearly a century during which these gatherings have been held all parts of the nation have had opportunity to welcome and entertain the plumed battalions, and it is not recorded that a single host has failed to do ample honor to its guests. In the more recent years, or beginning with the close of the civil war, communities in every geographical quarter of the nation have claimed the privilege of throwing their gates and their homes open to the knights and their families, and it is of the cementing influences thus promoted, rather than of the mystic phases of the order or its conclaves, that we deem it well to speak here.

One of the very first, and by all means the most important and imposing, national assemblages in the United States following the cessation of hostilities in the South, and while reconstruction was still pursuing its harshest ways, was the Knights Templars triennial conclave of 1874 in New Orleans. It was the first occasion since the late fifties upon which representative citizens of the North, South, East and West had come together in a fraternal spirit. There was still lacking popular warmth between the sections, but New Orleans received and hospitably and even lavishly entertained as Knights Templars men from the North who had borne arms against the South whom it would have repelled in any other garb or guise.

Here was beautifully and impressively exemplified a fact that has been confirmed and emphasized in a dozen later conclaves—the fact that this respectable and powerful offshoot of Masonry is a blending and a binding force in American nationalism. It is not customary, we are aware, to so regard Knight Templary in these days, but if the influence its conclaves have exerted toward the restoration of good feeling among Americans during the last forty years could only be measured, it would be found to have been equal to, if not beyond, that of any other.

The Knights Templars have been through all the years of their existence as an order in this country representative of its best citizenship, and this is true whether they have been of one section or another. Because they have been on the higher plane of citizenship they have been able to diffuse effectively the fraternalism which the country has needed above all things in the last half century. They are engaged at Denver this week in diffusing this fraternalism, as they shall continue to do in all the conclaves to come, and it is but right that citizens outside their ranks should bear testimony to their individual worth and collective patriotism.

MRS. EDITH W. PIERCE, the inspector of Philadelphia streets who entered upon her duties this week, says she proposes to enlist every woman she can in the clean-up that is about to be inaugurated. It would do no harm if she should enlist the men also.

Revision of the figures shows the total import and export trade of the United States for the last fiscal year to have been $4,275,000,000, an increase of $421,000,000 over the previous year. Commercially, the nation is breaking all records.

ONE of the problems of the period is how to get the voters to vote on municipal bond proposals. Experience in communities of California and Pennsylvania recently seems to prove that public indifference in this respect is not diminishing.

THE MONITOR on Monday gave some figures showing the comparative cost of table supplies in the Panama Canal Zone and in Boston, and these, from the point of view of economic housekeeping, were almost entirely, and sometimes greatly, in favor of the former place. In the Canal Zone the United States government is at once an absolute and shameless monopolist and an unselfish and generous philanthropist. So far as it has to do with the feeding and the housing of its employees and their dependents it is a corporation not for profit. It buys all supplies in bulk and distributes them at actual cost, plus a charge sufficient to meet the expense of service.

It is utterly impossible to say what might be done in Boston under similar auspices and circumstances. No doubt, if some private persons here enjoyed all the advantages claimed by the United States government in the Panama Canal Zone they could buy, distribute and sell just as cheaply.

Let it be remembered, however, that the United States government is in business in the Canal Zone, let it be remembered that there is a Canal Zone, simply because the people who do business upon another principle, in Boston and elsewhere throughout the country, have made these things possible. The millions that go into the United States treasury and the millions that have gone into the Panama canal have been raised largely among the people who are doing business in accordance with a system which the Canal Zone plan, if generally adopted, would overturn.

Manifestly, the old system is not altogether equitable. Manifestly also, an attempt to introduce the Canal Zone system precipitately would result only in creating confusion. Under the circumstances, the thing to do is to study closely the Canal Zone system. It may take years, it may take decades, to bring about an equitable distribution of the fruits of the earth, but it can and will be done. The wise cease to waste time in merely wishing for it and take the better part of working toward it.

IF THE RATIO for the last six months shall be maintained, Missouri will issue 40,000 automobile licenses this year, and this is another reason why the Governor of that state wants everybody to get out and work the roads.

Selection of the School a Common Problem So MANY households are confronted with the problem of selecting the school for one or more of its rising members that there is no need to frame a justification for the topic. Nor is there danger that all the information desired will not be supplied. With the enterprise of the schools in graphic publicity, with the agencies that the newspapers maintain for the inquirers, with the extensive advertising in journals of various classes, there is spread before the seeker all possible and needful aid. There is the other possibility of such abundance of offerings as to make selection a complex problem instead of the simple one a narrower range would make it. There remains the need of discriminating judgment.

Here is an individual problem. When the public schools have supplied their full measure, and the boy or girl is looking abroad for the fuller preparation, there comes the extreme test of the parental or friendly guidance. The selection narrows for the larger number, in these days of special schools, by a choice of the calling that is to be pursued. None of the employments of the long list the demands of the times have called into existence, lacks its provision of a special institution or at least of a special course. Fortunate is the child whose bent is clear and whose guidance is solely directed to the point of the best means of developing to the best efficiency. For him the problem reduces to a question of the school which provides the most certain training, the best equipment and the clearest instruction.

When the aim is a general culture, a fitting for the world in the right sense, there is the greater difficulty. Now it is the securing of the right sort of finish, to adopt a word that has not been free from its abuses but still has its value. Finishing schools there still are, but it is certain that they have a substantial quality of instruction that was not always associated with them. Veneers are out of vogue. The girls, and it is for girls that finish in the educational sense seems to be sought, are no longer finished by a process of delivering a few genteel accomplishments. Substance is demanded, the acquirement of real knowledge and of the faculty for continued acquirement beyond the school. School catalogs and all the announcements show a fine concession to the demand that women shall have more than ornaments in learning. Thus the chance of going amiss is much reduced if not altogether removed.

Aside from the limitation that the purse may establish, the question becomes almost wholly one of selecting the school with the associations that will be most to the advantage of the pupil in the time of schooling and beyond it. The school where the daughters of the rich are most numerous may not be the one where the family of moderate means and prospects would choose to have the daughter acquire her notions of life. But even here the democratic quality that overlooks all distinctions of wealth may be said to bar generally any upsetting of the prudence that needs to be preserved in spending.

If college is sought, there is hardly need of advice. The leanings of the parents, the traditions of the family, the acquaintance with those who have a fine loyalty to the one that gave them their training, these and other considerations are likely to remove the selection from discussion. But with all the increase of college attendance there remain a great number who will seek the completion of their schooling in shorter course. The number of the schools at their disposal is large and the one word of counsel is that there be no less careful weighing of the needs of the young person, the prospects of future station and the practical worth of the offered courses, than if it were a case of preparing for a particular trade or calling. The solution will be aided if not completely supplied by the use of the information that all the schools eagerly provide for those who ask it.

It is now over fifty-five years since the first cable message was received from Europe. Like many other great steps forward, however, this one seemed to halt for a time. It was not until eight years later that Cyrus W. Field met with complete success in his great undertaking

THE MOST remarkable, perhaps, of all the facts which have emerged from the welter of politics in the Balkans is the hegemony of Rumania. If anybody had hazarded, a year ago, the opinion that Bulgaria would lose the hegemony, he would have been regarded as a dreamer of dreams. If, when the rush of the Bulgars had hurled the Turks out of Kirk Kilisse and driven them back behind the Tchataldja lines, anybody had questioned the

The Hegemony of Rumania supremacy of King Ferdinand, the idea would have aroused laughter. Yet, within a few weeks, the Rumanian policy of a generation has culminated. The astonished chancelleries see the effect of King Charles' quiet, yet none the less brilliant statesmanship in the issue which has made him the mediator of the Balkans in the present crisis.

A generation ago, when Russia marched on Constantinople, the troops of King Charles marched side by side with them on the earthworks of Plevna. In all the fierce fighting that followed, no men did more marvelous work than the children of that mingling of the blood of Trajan's legionaries with that of the Dacian peasants. When even the rush of Skobelef's bayonets was retreating before Osman Pasha's Turks, the Rumanians forced their way into the Gravitza redoubt, and there close by, amidst the massive earthworks of Plevna, stands the little church which commemorates the deed. The part played by Rumania won the independence of the country, but though, since 1881 Rumania has been a kingdom, she has always been regarded in the chancelleries as the sleeping partner of the triple alliance, ready at a word from Vienna to march her million soldiers under the Hohenzollern and Hohenlohe eagles. Today, all that is changed. The policy of King Charles, carefully matured for upwards of thirty years, has suddenly taken expression in the phrase which The Christian Science Monitor was permitted to quote the other day, that from henceforth, Rumania stands for herself, unentangled by European alliances.

It is only a few weeks since the Rumanian army crossed the Danube. Yet the Rumanian sentries have at once threatened and protected Sofia. Rumanian battalions have blocked the inroad of the Turks by the great railway center of Philippopolis, whilst the King has sent out from Bucharest his warning to the Turk to retire from Adrianople and the expression of his hopes to the King at Athens and the King at Belgrade that they will be moderate in the demands they are about to formulate in Sofia, and will not, in those demands, ask anything which will prevent the presentation of a united front by the Balkan states to the questionable attentions of the great kingdoms by which they are surrounded. The Balkans, "a thing of shreds and patches," is a quantite negligeable in the chancelleries; but the Balkans, united in a common cause, may yet say no to Vienna at Salonika, to Italy at Valona and to Russia at Constantinople.

IN THE midsummer period, people in general, and some people in particular, who have more time than responsibility on their hands, are inclined to indulge their fancy in the construction of peculiar theories. Anybody doubtful on this point need only render himself receptive and make note of what he hears. Allowing a long list of other illustrations to pass for the present, perhaps it will not appear inopportune or prove uninteresting to take up the advice emanating from a learned source to the effect that if people want to feel real good in the summer time they will sprint for the train, or for the street car, as the case may be. One reason why there is discontent in the world, according to this authority, is that people, and especially people over 40, do not sprint.

It is held that sprinting brings out the very best qualities of the man or woman, whether he or she is a resident of the environs or of the suburbs, whereas the disposition to avoid sprinting, so common in our day among all classes, is likely to stunt or actually destroy the higher emotions. In the morning, for example, the commuter times himself, or tries to time himself, so that he may walk leisurely from his home to the station. The result is that he has denied himself the pleasure of sprinting. He should time himself so as to be just a little late for his breakfast and just a little late in starting for the station, and if he then can convince himself that he is likely to be a little late for his train he will give an exhibition in sprinting that will not only shake himself up into good humor but edify the whole neighborhood through which he sprints.

Need it be said that there are scores, nay hundreds, nay thousands, of commuters and street car patrons who either habitually or periodically sprint, not from choice, but mainly from necessity, and that neither the people of the neighborhoods through which they sprint, nor the people in the conveyances for which they sprint have ever been able to notice that they are any the better for their sprinting. No doubt some may be found who are born sprinters, and some who become sprinters, but if the matter is carefully inquired into it will be found that people over 40 who indulge in it as a rule have sprinting thrust upon them.

There is a time for everything, and, consequently, there must be a time for sprinting, but it is not after one has attained to the dignity of 40, nor is it immediately after breakfast on a hot summer morning. In this age of time tables and regular habits the great stream of street car patrons and commuters know almost to the fraction of a second just how much time they have from the house to the station or the corner, and they manage it with admirable nicety, and so that they are all smiling when they take their seats or their favorite straps. And not the least of the episodes that add a touch of humor to the morning for most of these people is the man who, with coat on arm and hat in hand, and hair flying to the winds, is seen sprinting in the distance and often sprinting in vain.

What every community seems to need is an annual backlotters' fair. There should be greater popular recognition of and enthusiasm for the town or city man who makes a garden.

MISSOURI'S "Good Road Days" are to be Aug. 20 and 21, according to Governor Major's proclamation, and all the other states in the Union are becoming very much interested in the outcome.

More than 2,000,000 farmers in the United States use the telephone. It probably seems, now and then, on the rural circuits as if they were all using it at the same time.
